

Seattle Fashionistas

Stefanie Furer covers the fashion world

Updated Apr 5, 2011 - 2:38 pm

Style to Go

Be the first of your friends to recommend this.

Posted by Stefanie

How many times have you been running late to an event and couldn't figure out what to do with your hair? Or, better yet, how many times have you had to stay late at work, knowing you have a date immediately after, and you have no time to run home and touch up your makeup and ring out your rain-soaked hair?

I know I've been in similar situations many times, and was so frustrated that there were so few options before. You could:

1. Book an appointment at a salon and pay way too much money for a simple airwave or blowout.
2. Arrive at your event or date, with slightly frizzy, wavy hair replacing your sleek, smooth blowout from 8 a.m. that morning, and hope he doesn't notice.
3. Attempt to fix your messy hair with the cheap blow dryer you towed in your purse in your office's bathroom.

Well, you don't have to worry about any of these options anymore, thanks to Swink Style Bar in Downtown Seattle.

A former co-worker, friend and fellow makeup artist, Suresh Seneviratne, is on-hand for makeup touch-ups or full applications. He's an amazing makeup artist who has worked with nearly every makeup line during his career, including Stila, Smashbox and Chanel, among many others. He even has his own line of gorgeous lip gloss. He's a makeup genius!

Swink offers a menu of varying hair styles to choose from, ranging from The sleek Fifth Avenue for your big downtown job interview to the tousled G&T for a first date. All updos and blowouts are $30 and take approximately 30 minutes. What's also great is you don't have to book an appointment days in advance. Walk-ins are available for those in a rush or faced with a last-minute event invitation.

Where was this place before when I worked in downtown Seattle?

Swink Style Bar

611 Stewart Street

Seattle, WA 98101

(206) 682-7070

www.swinkstylebar.com